Chris Watkins is widely known for his work as an adept character designer of cartoons, comic books and strips, fantasy, sci-fi, childrens' and genre concept illustration.

- With over ten years of professional freelance illustrational experience, he shows off his dual education in art and writing by creating fun visuals that tell stories.
- In addition to that, he is also a pioneer in the field of webcomics with his own personal anthology site which he has named BorderWalker.com.
- Along with his usual talents, Chris has also worked as a professional website Graphic Designer for over seven years, has experienced and achieved the role of an English Teacher in Japan, skilled in writing and translating the Japanese language, thus making himself a fluent speaker.
- As a Comic Creator and Graphic Designer, Chris has gained the attention of clients such as Guardians of Order, Hero Games, Thomson Delmar Learning, Manga Graphix, The Gaming Herald, and his own www.BorderWalker.com, with himself as Editor-in-Chief of the online web comic site, which features many other comics along with his own works.
- With his focus set on other sequential art, including storyboards, he is also a Comic Artist and Web Developer with skills extending to the creation of web graphics, and game concept art.
- And last, but not least, the most of Chris' outstanding artwork is done with ink, pencil, watercolor and computer. His pieces are published in books and supplements from West End Games, Goodman Games, Hero Games, Z-Man Games, and Guardians of Order.
- This Comic Creator and Illustrator has developed character designs that include mascots for the Gaming Herald, the Dragonflight Convention, and other clients along with designing characters and concept artwork for video games.
- This is what Chris has to say, “I create realistic and cartoon artwork primarily in ink, as well as digitally colored lineart, comics, character and logo designs, and lots in between”.
